Bexei Primus

Aaron Becsei is a third generation watchmaker born in Budapest, Hungary and his independent brand is no less respectable than that of the finest Swiss manufactures. In 2008, after several years repairing and restoring clocks and watches, Aaron completed his first wristwatch, the Primus. The hand-wound movement has a patented three-axis tourbillon that Becsei invented and which allows for the use of jewel bearings instead of ball bearings. Each tourbillon cage turns at different rates, with the inner cage turning every 30 seconds, the middle cage turning every two and a half minutes and the third outer cage turning around in twelve and a half minutes. The balance wheel moves through 3,750 different positions in twelve and a half minutes. Primus has hour, minute and second retrograde indications and include a wind-up indicator. Primus boasts a duration of 40 hours between winding. This stunning timepiece has diamond end stones, a hand engraved guilloché dial with a case made of 18 carat white gold. The Primus, like all other Bexei models, is entirely hand made by Aaron Becsei himself. Production is limited to nine pieces.
